

FACES & PLACES

Victoria Gaved and Sara Mendes da Costa

Katie Piper Foundation at Drakes

Piper is a beautiful young woman, rebuilding her life after surviving a brutal attack in 2008, where sulphuric acid was thrown in her face.

Becky Hollands, of Becky Hollands Aesthetics met Katie at the Q-med annual conference at the Royal College of Physicians earlier this year, and they became friends.

From its inception, the Katie Piper Foundation has relied on contributions from individuals. Becky Holland's innovation has been to give a percentage of the money she receives for administering aesthetic treatments directly to Katie's Foundation and simultaneously encouraging others to do so.

This initiative came to life recently with the launch at Drakes Hotel, Brighton, and Katie was introduced to those involved in the beauty and aesthetic industry in Brighton, and the South East. After delivering a moving and amusing speech, Becky Hollands donated £2000 to the Katie Piper Foundation.

Jane Leatham with her daughters, Becky Hollands and Sharon Crawford-Jones

Katie Piper and Becky Hollands

Darren James and Johan van der Merwe

Lisa Bond, Dr. Farrokh Sharifzad and Sonya Trott

Yasmin Fakhrosseini and Susan Cowen

The Katie Piper Foundation is working towards the delivery of an advanced rehabilitation and burns clinic in the UK. The aim is to include residential facilities for patients that will enable them to benefit directly from treatments and from social interaction with other survivors.

Q-Med trainer Teresa Simmonds and Susan Cowen

Becky Hollands, actress Barbara Whatley, and Beulah Grant

Photographs Richard Bidwell

Charlotte Duck of Q-Med UK with Becky Hollands

Ali-Doughty, Hélène Sprey and Dawn Bennett

Barbara O'Connor, Yasmin Fakhrosseini, Becky Hollands, Susan Cowen and Sara Mendes da Costa

